Education

University of San Diego, California – Graduation: Expected in 2026
B.S. in Cognitive Science, with Specialization in Design and Interaction

Relevant Coursework

COGS 3

- I learned the essentials of front-end development; the course emphasized mastering responsive design and implementing industry best practices in Web development.
- I gained competency in HTML5 and CSS3 and was introduced to Bootstrap.
- Additionally, the curriculum provided a brief introduction to UI/UX, offering assignments aimed at improving Photoshop skills. I also delved into fundamental programming using Excel and JavaScript.

SE 3

- I utilized computer graphics (CAD software) to communicate engineering designs, employing visualization, sketching, adhering to 2D and 3D graphics standards, applying dimensioning and tolerance principles, managing assemblies, and conducting prototyping and testing using light manufacturing techniques.
- Additionally, I was introduced to project and system management software like building information modeling (BIM), emphasizing the effective use of computer resources.

VIS 41

- I gained a solid foundation in contemporary design communication techniques during this course. These techniques were introduced considering their importance in visual culture and the speculative design field.
- We explored digital image editing, typography, vector-based illustration, diagramming, and document layout.
- Additionally, I learned about basic digital video editing tools and web production formats. The focus was on mastering these skills through repetitive practice and presenting various projects."
